THE SUGGESTOPAEDIC EDUCATION AND INSTRUCTION IN ALL SUBJECTS IN THE 10TH FORM OF THE GENERAL EDUCATIONAL SCHOOL

G.Lozanov

Summary

The suggestopaedic method is applied not only for foreign language training but also for instruction in other school subjects. In the 1970/1971 academic year one class of the 10th Grade was trained in all school subjects in the Research Institute of Suggestology. It was formed as a model of a class typical for the conditions in Sofia, both in composition and in average grading and behaviour.

Positive educational and instructional results were achieved. The conscious attitude to the process of instruction has been increased and educational work has improved. The academic year was reduced by two months and the material provided for the year was learnt at higher standards by the control class. Both the school and home work were also reduced considerably. Time has been freed for additional physical training and aesthetical classes. The process of instruction was experienced very pleasantly. There was no unjustified absenteeism and there was no case of a single playing truant. Not only considerable memorisation of the material was established but also activation of constructive thinking as well as a more harmonious formation of the trainees in aethical respect. Both parents and children have unanimously indicated the many-sided advantages of the suggestopaedic method.
